Trust-Based Relational Interventions

9:00 a.m. - 12:00 p.m. 3 CEUs

Trust Based Relational Interventions (TBRI) is a therapeutic model that trains caregivers and teachers to provide effective support and treatment to children with a history of trauma. It can be utilized in homes, schools, childcare facilities, churches, and in therapy. The key elements are connection, empowerment, and correction. The model is based on an understanding of neurological development, physiological processes, and emotional needs. This presentation will provide an overview of TBRI principles and supportive techniques.

Drugs Affecting Our Communities and Schools

1:00 p.m. - 2:30 p.m. 1.5 CEUs

The presentation will address the current drugs and trends in the schools and communities. Participants will learn how to assess the type of drug problem within the community and determine the level of risk factors. An emphasis is placed on the raising an awareness and the seriousness of the community's problem and ways to best prevent re-occurring issues. Lastly, participants will gain insight into various treatment modalities to combat drug and alcohol addiction.
